Persian. (Also other varieties.) SELECTING VARIETIES. Experience has taught that no variety of citrus is preeminently useful for all portions of the world where this fruit is grown. As an illustration we have the Bahia, or Washington navel orange, which is preeminently adapted for California, but of little value in Florida or the West Indies, since it produces only a small crop except on rough-lemon stock, which stock is only adapted to a restricted area. Certain varieties of pomelo have exquisite flavor when fruited in Florida, but are not of the same excellence when grown in California. The pineapple orange and the Indian River orange are among the finest of fruits when grown in the sections where they originated, but when produced in Jamaica they can not be said to have superior qualities. It becomes necessary, therefore, to test the particular variety in the section into which it is to be introduced. Some of the varieties are excellent in places far removed from one another, as is illustrated by the Satsuma, or onshu, an introduction from Japan, and the Bahia orange, which was brought from Brazil by the United States Department of Agriculture and is now so extensively grown in California. The last-named variety produces fruit of excellent quality when...
