Its etiology poorly understood. 20%-50% of the cause of CP is unknown. This study was done to identify some of the risk factors. 62 cerebral palsied children were subject matter of the study, and 62 children match age and sex as control. Info was obtained through qualitative mode of research- investigative/explorative questioning of mothers and/or guardian of the subject children. Findings were multifactorial; study revealed antenatal (gestational) risk factors mainly associated with developed countries, were equally evident in research study area (Ohangwena-NAMIBIA) which is a developing country. Case in point, maternal high blood pressure. Other factors typical of developing country were the likes of poor maternal nutrition (low protein intake during pregnancy) and low educational level of mothers. The study also found out a long held concept that; home deliveries areas major cause of CP was not a case, incidence of CP was at par between institutional and home deliveries. Absence of a steady decline in the percentage (%) of...
