Geographically, its northwestern extremity is at the Isthmus of Tehnantepec and its southwestern extremity at the Isthmus of Panama. Politically, it includes the British colony of Belize and five independent Republics. One of the largest three is the Republic of Honduras. To the west of Honduras lie the Republics of Guatemala and Salvador, to the south of it Nicaragua and Costa Rica. The area of Honduras is about five thousand square miles larger than that of the State of Pennsylvania. Its northern coast line is about 350 miles long. Its southern coast line nearly surrounds the Bay of Fonseca. and is seventy miles long. The surface is generally mountainous, but the central part of the Republic consists of a large plateau of 3,000 to 4,000 feet elevation above sea level. The country is drained by...
